Abstract This study examines the technical and economic performance of a grid-connected rooftop photovoltaic system with a nominal capacity of 8456 kW. The analysis is based on a case study of an industrial plant in Iran, considering both the feed-in tariff and time-of-use scheme.

Abstract This study examines the technical and economic performance of a grid-connected rooftop photovoltaic system with a nominal capacity of 8456 kW. The analysis is based on a case study of an industrial plant in Iran, considering both the feed-in tariff and time-of-use scheme.

NREL analyzes the total costs associated with installing photovoltaic (PV) systems for residential rooftop, commercial rooftop, and utility-scale ground-mount systems. This work has grown to include cost models for solar-plus-storage systems. NREL's PV cost benchmarking work uses a bottom-up.

Iran possesses 10% of the world's oil and 15% of global gas resources, with an energy intensity of 8 MJ per dollar of Gross Domestic Product (GDP). Over the past decade, Iran has become one of the highest emitters of carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>), following Japan and Germany. Additionally, the global.

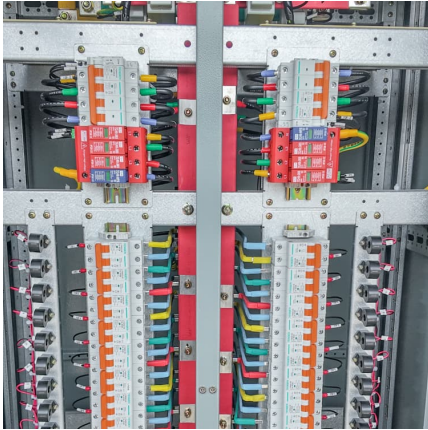

According to statistics, Iran's annual sunshine time exceeds 300 days, and the average solar radiation is about 19.50 (MJ/m<sup>2</sup>)/day, especially Kerman, Fars, Isfahan and Azd provinces, the annual radiation is as high as 2511 kWh/m<sup>2</sup>, these areas are the main gathering place of solar energy resources.

The average amount of radiation in Iran is about 950 watts per square meter. The solar panels available in the commercial market have an efficiency of about 17-22% and considering that the entire surface of a solar panel does not contain energy-receiving silicon, each square meter of these panels.
