Overview

How does procurement work in Brazil?

Brazil has very formalistic and regulated procurement laws and government purchasing methods. The vast majority of public tenders are limited to companies registered in Brazil. However, in some cases, foreign companies can participate in the process as a party to consortia.

What is Brazil's new procurement law?

Like its predecessor, the new Procurement Law contains very strict procurement rules that offer little room to public officials to change the procurement process. Brazil's new Procurement Law came into force on 1 April 2021.

Can foreign companies participate in public tenders in Brazil?

The vast majority of public tenders are limited to companies registered in Brazil. However, in some cases, foreign companies can participate in the process as a party to consortia. Due to the lack of funds available for large projects, in recent years governments have started to enter into public-private partnerships.

What are the rules governing direct purchasing in Brazil?

Strict rules apply to direct purchasing which expose the public officer responsible for the purchase to personal liability. Brazilian suppliers may also enter into consortia (consórcios) to bid on specific tenders. Under Brazilian law, consortia are regarded as contractual joint ventures.

How do public sector entities select suppliers?

Historically, price is the primary factor for public sector entities when selecting suppliers. Public sector entities, at the national and sub-national level, are precluded from making a distinction between domestic and foreign-owned companies during the tendering process.

Why do foreign companies prefer Brazilian goods & services?

When two equally qualified vendors are considered, the necessity for experience implementing regulations provide a preference for Brazilian goods and services. Brazil permits foreign companies with established legal entities in Brazil to compete for procurement financed by multilateral development bank loans.
